Panel Says Tax Case Is 'Closed,' Lauds Nixon's Vow to Pay $465,000

By Fred Farris

WASHINGTON, April 4 (IHT). -The Senate-House committee that investigated President Nixon's tex returns marked the case closed" today and commended the President for "his prempt decision" to pay back taxes and interest of $465,000. The Joint Committee on In-ternal Revenue Taxation said it

Revenue Service had advised the President on Tuesday that he owed about $465,000 in back taxes and interest. A spokesman said the President would pay it.

A White House statement said the Internal Revenue Service report rebute any suggestion of fraud on the part of the Presi-dent" and noted that the committee staff report "offers no facts which would support any such charge."

Late today, the IRS said it did not charge civil fraud penalties against Mr. Nixon, believing them unwarranted, and that it was

Aaron Ties Ruth's Record

CINCINNATI, April 4 (IHT).-Heury Aaron of the Atlanta Braves tied Babe Ruth's major league career home run record today as he hit one in his first time at bat in the opening game of the 1974 baseball season. Both men are at the 714 mark. Aaron's shot over the leftfield fence came on a three-balls, one-strike pitch by Jack Billingham of the Cinchnesti Reds at Riverfront Stadium here.

Ruth, who played most of his years in the majors with the New York Yankees, amused his total in 22 seasons. Details on Page 13.

New Russian Film Is Causing Cultural, Cinematic Shocks

By Robert G. Kaiser

MOSCOW, April 4 (WP).—A a Moscow intellectual observed. Fealistic new movie with strong religious overtones and a gloomy, permanent tension between this violent ending has caused a senzation in Moscow. The excitement is not surprising, since the film contradicts most of the rules of Soviet cinematography and official enEural policy.

The movie appeals to intellectuals and ordinary people alike and is drawing huge audiences to 53 Moscow theaters. Many of the ordinary viewers seem shocked by the bloody, pessionistic end-ing, and the intellectuals dispute the film's philosophical positions, but there is general agreement that it is the best Soviet film in

A Western moviegoer would probably agree. The film, "Kalina Krasnaya" ("The Red Snowball Tree"), is well-made and superbly acted. It succeeds in conveying a credible portrait of Soviet life -a rare achievement in movies

How the film was made, and why it was approved for wide distribution, are mysteries. "Kalina Krasnaya" seems ntterly out of step with the current doctrines "Socialist realism," and its implicit pessimism is far from the conventional wisdoms of Marrism-Leninism. Yet, according to a rumor widely believed by wellinformed Muscovites, one of the senior officials of the Soviet Union-a member of the ruling Polithuro of the Communist party -personally approved the movie.

Finitering Beviews An unusual series of flattering reviews in official newspapers have provided circumstantial evidence that the movie enjoys a special kind of official blessing. Many intellectuals attribute the film's official success to the fact that it was made by Vasily Shukshin a man of many talents and humble rural origins. Mr.: Shukshin wrote "Kalina Krasnaya," directed it and played the capital's creative elite and the officials who control their creativity. "Kalina Krasnaya" is about a professional criminal, Yegor Prokudin who vows to go straight after he leaves jail and looks up a farm girl, Lyuba, in a remote village. I need a holiday of the spirit," he says.

The Chase

His apparent inner peace as a tractor driver is disrupted when he learns his old gang wants him back. His former boss and three gang members finally come for Yegor, who is killed. Lyuba's brother gets in his dump truck, chases the criminals, and at a ferry crossing, knocks their car and the occupants into the river. The car sinks to the bottom. The movie ends with Lyuba's face above a peasant's wood fire. In the background, Yegor's voice speaks: "Don't be sad, Lyuba... You have to live. When wa meet, you'll tell me everything. ..." This bitter ending surprises Soviet audiences and has con-(Continued on Page 2, Col. 1)

PARIS, April 4 (WP).-Two leading contenders to succeed Georges Pompidou as president threw their bats into the ring today within hours of the private Paris funeral service for Mr. Pompidou and his burial in a small

Lisbon Advises That 3 Marias Be Acquitted

LISBON, April 4 (UPI).-The state today recommended acquittal of three Portoguese writers and their publisher who are being tried on charges of producing a pornographic book, "New Portuguese Letters."

The recommendation was made in a brief statement after the formal reading of the charges against Maria Isabel Barreno, 34, Maria Velio de Costa, 35, Maria Teresa Horta, 35, and Romeu de Melo. The women are known as the "Three Marias" and their trial has been a cause of protest among femmist movements.

Under Portuguese juridical procedure. Judge Acacso Lopes Cardosa need not follow the state's recommendation. But defense lawyers said they believe he will do so when the court reconvenes after Easter.

In the French multi-party, runoff ballot politics, the best chance the Socialists have of winning the presidency is by proving to country's anti - Communist Centrist voters before the first ballot that Mr. Mitterrand is his own boss. Then, Centrists would feel less guilty about voting for him on the runoff despite the

The incident exploded earlier this week with press reports about a fi-million land deal in which Mr. Wilson's political sec-retary, Mrs. Marcia Williams, and her brother and sister allegedly were involved. The newspaper stories did not allege that anything illegal had been done or that Mr. Wilton himself was involved personally. But the London Daily Mail asserted that Mr. Wilson's signa-ture was forged on a letter connected with the deal, written on his personal House of Commons letterhead while he was leader of the opposition before the Feb.

A statement from his lawyers said: "Neither as prime minister nor as leader of the opposition nor in any other capacity was Mr. Wilson involved in any way in any of these transactions." Britain's tough libel laws made it difficult for newspapers to comment further on the case. But political commentators said that, although there were no allegations that the reported land deal was in any way illegal, it was a highly embarrassing issue for Mr. Wilson's Labor party, which fiercely attacked land and property speculation during the

"The FBI will use all available resources and take all necessary actions to carry out responsibility to pursue this case to a successful conclusion." Mr. Kelley said. Yesterday, Miss Hearst, the newspaper heiress who was dragged screaming from her apartment two months ago, renounced her family and declared she was joining her terrorist kid-nappers as a revolutionary. "Personally, I don't believe it." Mr. Hearst said, after hearing the tape, "We've had her for years, they've had her 60 days and I don't believe she's going to change her philosophy that quickly or that radically." "If it is her choice to become a member of an organization like this, we still love her," he added.

Her mother said today: "Only Patty in person can convince me that the terrible, weary words that she uttered came from her heart and were delivered by her own free will.

Soviet Missile Renewal Held Costly, With Uncertain Result

By Michael Getler

WASHINGTON, April 4 (WP). -Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger estimates that it would cost the Soviet Union between $30 billion and $45 billion over a seven-year period if Mcscow decided to replace 1,400 of its most modern land-based missiles with bigger and better versions now being tested.

Yet even this investment, Mr. Schlesinger said, will not provide the Soriet Union with an ability to launch a "high-confidence" attack against American missie

This is in part because the United States would be forced to take counteractions in the interim if the arms race is not checked through negotiations, he said. It also is due in part to lingering uncertainties about mis-sile accuracy in the "real world" of an actual attack which would cause doubts in the mind of any "rational leader." he says. The Pentagon chief's latest -- merks on the nuclear arms balance were made public resterday with the release of testimony in closed session March 4 before a Senate Foreign Reintions subcommittee.

The hearing was held before Secretary of State Henry Kissinger went to Moscow and falled to reach agreement on general concepts for a new arms topaty. The defense secretary made it clear that the United States wants to limit the amount of throx-weight-or overal! lifting power-in the Soviet arsenal.

If the Russians do replace their old missiles, he said, they could have about 12 million pounds of throx-weight, equal to 7,600 to 2,600 individual nuclear warheads equivalent to 1 million to 2 million tons of TNT. #### NATO Marks Its 25th Year; Luns, Nixon Appeal for Unity

NATO celebrated its 25th anniversary today with an appeal to America to keep its troops in Europe and to Europeans to help pay for them.

The 15-member nations held a 30-minute ceremony at the NATO building here. The only speaker was NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns.

He urged both Europe and America to make "special efforts" to keep such issues as consultation, trade, troop costs and the Europeans' search for their owu separate "identity" from dividing the alliance.

The alliances future depends, Mr. Luns said, "on the readiness of the Europeao allies to shoulder their fair part" of defense spending and on the ability of the United States and Canada to resist pressures to withdraw U.S. and Canadian forces from Eu-

Mr. Luns praised the strength and longevity of NATO and said no alliance with so many members has ever lasted so long.

The NATO treaty was signed in Washington on April 4, 1949, by the foreign ministers of Belgium. Caoada, Denmark, France, Icclend, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netberlands, Norway, Portugal, Britain and the United States. They had one purpose: to keep the Soviet bloc's armies out of Western Europe. Greece and Turker joined the alliance in 1951. West Germany was admitted in PARIS, April 4 (AP). - Gen. Georges Revers, 82, former French Army chief of staff, died last week, it was announced yesterday. Gen. Revers fell into disgrace because he advocated a partial French withdrawal from Vietnam at the height of the French Indochina war.

In a secret report on the military situation in Vietnam in 1949, Gen. Revera denounced the "incoherence" of the colonial administration, corruption of Vietnamese officials and poor prospects of victory over the Vietnamese Communists.

The report, sharply contradicting official policy, was later discovered in the possession of a suspected Vietnamese Communist agent arrested in Paris.

For Salads

Remember those old-fashioned French salad baskets in which wet greens are swung around and around by hand to eliminate the rinsing water? They were O.K. provided you had a great outdoors and a strong right arm. The som-drier consists of two parts, a removable inner basket for the greens and an outer stationary holder. There is a ring attached to a belt which, when pulled causes the inner besket to rotate at high speed and the water from the rinsed greens flow out by centrifugal force into the outside holder.

There is one gadget I prize which I rarely use for the express purpose for which it is made. It is a small grinder whose primary use, according to the German manufacturer. #### France's New Future a man of the day-before-yesterday and of the day-after-tomorrow." President Georges Pompidou, the aide whom he made prime minister and privately named as his presidential successor—then disowned, unsuccessfully-was a man for today.

Simple out hightly literate, warm but shrewd, a moderate conservative, pragmatic in all things, be will be remembered as the man who seized the scepter when the general fell and who consolidated the Gaullist revolution. He led France toward the center at home and, until his last year, toward the unity of West Europe, opening for Britain the door to the Common Market that De Gaulle had kept closed.

The tragedy is that, like the general, he clung to power too long, after a debilitating filness had sapped his energy and patience. Political setbacks contributed to the strain. While heavy losses in last year's parliamentary election still left his coalition government with a majority, the Gaullists as such became again a minority party in the National Assembly. There has more recently been a drift to the left, particularly as the energy crisis has begun to slow growth and raise prices.

"I get more Gaullist every day." President Nixon reportedly said in greeting France's President in Iceland last May, "And me, less and less, they say in France," Mr. Pompidou replied. Like the general, whose myth was that he was above polltics. Mr. Pompldou never formally joined the Ganllist party, but he dominated its activities nevertheless. He insisted from the day he became prime minister that a broad coalition with center, and center-right, parties, all favorable to a united Europe, was an essential underpinning to stability even when the Gaullists themselves held a majority in the National Assembly. But, more recently, his chief political concorns were to preserve the cohesion of his power base, the Gaullist party, his leadership of it and his control over the succession, as his followers began to press for a resignation that would bring an early c'ection under Gaullist management. A harder, more nationalist line toward the United States

Charles de Gaulle was once described as and his European partners, put forward in acid terms by his new foreign minister, Michel Jobert, helped appease traditional Gaullists and neutralize Communist and left-Socialist critics.

> The outlook now is for six weeks of uncertainty. The Gaullist party is more or less united behind former Prime Minister Jacques Chaban-Delmas, a liberal pro-European, friendly to the United States. But the leader of the Independent Republicans, Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing, the Gaullists's chief ally in the coalition, has long had presidential ambitions and may split the vote in the first round of the election.

The Socialist leader, François Mitterand, will be a formidable opponent. With support from the Communists and some of the center-left, he won 45 percent of the vote when he ran against Gen. de Gaulle in 1985. Since then, he has reorganized the Socialist party, built both organizational strength and public backing and shaped a more formal alliance with the Communists, whose electoral power he now can match or possibly exceed. A left victory cannot be ruled out. It would lead to a clash with the Gaullist majority in the National Assembly and a considerable period of political confusion, with new parliamentary elections likely at an early date.

Election of Mr. Chaban-Delmas or Mr. Giscard d'Estaing would bring another Gaullist coalition government, with substantial center support, little immediate change at home and the likelihood of more moderate policles abroad, including a more conciliatory attitude toward France's European partners and the United States, similar to President Pompidon's before his illness.

There is no center party candidate capable of challenging both the Socialist-Communist of coming to power only with Communist support. The dangers are obvious, both for France and the Atlantic Alliance. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Sen. James L. Buckley of New York takes atrong exception (today's Letters) to some remarks made in The Washington Post editorial (IHT, March 21) concerning his call for President Nixon's resignation. Although the offeding editorial quoted freely from Mr. Buckley's text and enclosed all such material within the confines of quotation marks, the senator expresses concern that some readers may have taken an itallcized sentence (without quotation marks) in which we paraphrased his argument to be a direct quotation from him. We don't know why readers would have: we didn't intend that they should; and we hope that they did not.

So we apologize to any reader who took that sentence to be a quotation from Sen. Buckley. It was, on the contrary, a characterization of his argument - and an accurate one, despite the senator's complaint. For however Sen. Buckley now chooses to describe the content of his statement, he did in fact rest his preference for a presidential resignation in large part on a view that the constitutionally prescribed process for removal of a president from office—namely. impeachment proceedings—was too risky for the nation to undergo. And, baving described a prospective Senate impeachment trial variously as some kind of "Roman circus" and some kind of "melodrama" in which "the most sordid dregs dug np by the Watergate miners would inflame the passions of the domestic audience." Sen. Buckley professes himself at a loss to understand where we got the idea that he didn't have much confidence in the rectitude of his coileagues or the maturity of the public.

Sen. Buckley seems mistakenly to assume from what we said that (1) we are opposed to a presidential resignation (or even a call for one; under any circumstances and that (2) we are so opposed because we are lusting after Mr. Nixon's humiliation in an impeachment trial. He is wrong on both counts. But since we despair of effectively explaining our position to anyone who has such an abysmal view of our motives, we will go at it another way. We will call witnesses whom Sen. Buckley respects: Sen. Barry Goldwater, Sen. Jesse Helms, Sen. Strom Thurmond and Sen. Carl Curtis, for example. These are among the people who rejected Mr. Bnckley's proposal and to whom we must assume he does not impute moral and intellectual squalors of the kind he imputes to us. Sen, Helms put it this way:

with Sen. Buckley that Mr. Nixon should resign. But if Mr. Nixon is innocent, as he claims to be, I feel it would be destructive to the long-range best interests of the country for him to yield to the rising clamor."

Sen. Goldwater had this to say:

"If any evidence of criminal acts on the part of the President is proven I will change my position and support the Bnckley proposal."

You will notice that both men hinge the possibility of a presidential resignation to the establishment of evidence that Richard Nixon has in fact done something demonstrably and seriously wrong. Surely that should be a condition of any presidential resignation of the kind we are discussing (as distinct from a resignation or stepping aside on grounds of disability as provided for in the 25th Amendment). And surely the studied absence of any such suggestion is the principal flaw of Mr. Buckley's position as he stated it on March 19. In fact the senator went out of his way to state his conviction that resignation would not be taken as evidence of any wrongdoing or even weakness on Mr. Nixon's part. And in his letter to us today he again describes his reason for thinking that Mr. Nixon should leave office as proceeding from a "crisis of confidence"-a public state of mind, if you will-and not from any act committed by Mr. Nixon. That is why the suggestion made so little sense to us. And that is why it still does

The Saga of Nixon's Back Taxes

By Anthony Lewis

WASHINGTON-The sudden denouement of President Nixon's tax saga is another in a series of seemingly endless national shocks. It is not just the total amount the congressional staff found due, a staggering $476,431 Without penalties, or the $432,787 plus interest that the President has agreed to pay on demand of the Internal Revenue Service. It is the petty, the very petty, details of the ways tax was avoided

In deducting 25 percent of all the operating expenses of his home in San Clemente, Calif., Nixon included a portion of the cost of watering a three-hole golf course in 1969 and 1970. He took depreciation on a $2,369 cre-denza used at Key Biscayne. He deducted $5,391 spent in 1969 for food, beverages, decorations and rentals at "Miss Tricia Niron's masked ball," as the report put it. He deducted $33.576 for what the report called "food expenses of the First Family while at Key Biscayne, San Cle-mente and Camp David."

The figures and the facts are the more telling because of the notably dispassionate, indeed dry, tone of the report. The staif of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation is known for its utter avoidance of partisanship, and no one could read this extensive report without recognizing that it had held to that standard,

Cards and Flowers

The staff made a point of observing that the President could properly have taken some deductions, for example to buy Christmas cards or flowers for public gifts, if his lawyers had advanced some substantiation of those purposes. They did not.

Again, in finding that $92,298 in improvements at the Key Biscayne and San Clemente residences were primarily for Nixon's benefit, the report emphasized that it was not making any judgment on the propriety of the governmental spending It said only that the money must be regarded as income to Nixon. as must $27,105 in government air trips provided for his family

On the largest and most important issue—the deductions for Nixon's alleged gift of $576,000 in personal papers to the nation—the committee staff made compendious legal and factual findings against allowing the claimed deduction. It agreed with the many outside tax lawyers and scholars who had written on the subject, on issue after issue: whether the papers were really conveyed to the National Archives before the tax deduction. cutoff date of July 25, 1969, whether Nixon retained a property interest in them whether the deed was properly signed

Just why the President's aides tried to delay the congressional report's publication is mystifying. In any event, Nixon always had to deal with the Internal Revenue Service. It had agents working closely with the Joint Committee investigation and it would almost certainly have felt obligated to serve deficiency nolices on him if he failed to pay the amounts indicated-or most of them-voluntarily

No Fraud Charge

Indications are that the IRS has ruled out a fraud charge, either civil or criminal. The committee staff carefully took no position on that, or on the lesser penalties for negligence, but it did raise an eyebrow here and

A finding of negligence would have added a 5 percent penalty to the deficiencies, bringing the congressional total due with interest to $490,079. Civil fraud would have added 50 percent to all the deficiencies (whether individually fraudulent or not) and would suspend the statute of limitations on the 1969 return to '69 Return

The service never investigated Nixon's 1969 return, letting the statute of limitations run out despite the enormous claim for deductions on the doubtful gift of papers. When it finally got around to investigating the later returns, last May, the agents spent just eight days on the whole complex set of returns. They apparently never put any questions about the papers to the General Services Administration, which supposedly received the gift, or to the appraiser who

When that extraordinarily brisk and easy audit of the Nixon returns was completed, the of-ficial in charge wrote the Presi-dent: "I want to compliment you on the care shown in the preparation of your returns." That man, William D. Waters, has since been promoted to head the Philadelphia regional office. If public confidence in the tax system is not to be seriously damagby the Nixon scandal, the IRS will have to do some candid examination of itself.

Getting His Kicks

I was grieved to read in Samuel Justice's People column (IHT, March 27) that Prince Philip had been "kicked by a horse about half a mile from Windsor Castle." Knowing the area quite well, I would have been interested to know in which direction the prince had been kicked. If it had been in a northerly direction the prince would have landed in the playing fields of Eton.

Sadat Interview

Arrwar Sadat, in his interview with Arnaud de Borchgrave, does indeed give the impression of deep wisdom, if read by someone without the slightest knowledge of previous and current events in the Middle East. It is clear why Mr. de Borcherave did not the additional questions which leap into the reader's mind -for instance, when Mr. Sadat said that Egypt did not want to destroy Israel, what changed his mind? As it is well known that the October war had been prepared with Soviet training, Soviet weapons, Soviet strategy and with the intended outcome completely to Soviet advantage, aren't Mr. Sadat's remarks with regard to this subject pure eyewash? Considering the events during the war, what connection is there between the facts and Mr. Sadat's words? Regarding the Sucz Canal quite a long time before the October war a proposal was made by Israel to pull back a certain distance east of the canal demilitarize the area and so enable Egypt to reopen the canal This proposal was rejected by Egypt out of hand-why? It would seem that the situating today is not much different from the one that would result from an acceptance of this proposal. But what we must not forget is the fact that had Egypt (the USSR.) succeeded in its intention, the whole of the Middle East would now be in the hands of the Soviet Union, and we must not forget that Russia is not a country that ever gives up its intentions. It will, however, change its methods to suit any situation and will do anything at all to achieve its ends by any means

Many more questions must be asked with regard to Mr. Sadat's replies-it is to be hoped that the strategists are asking them.

In your [Washington Post] editorial "Sen. Buckley's Statement" (IHT, March 21) you correctly quote me as in no way implying guilt in my call for the President's resignation. Your answer is "Then why the hell should be resign?" You follow this question with: "... for the good of the nation, Sen. Buckley replies and in order to spare us the burden and pain of due process, in order to avoid the risk our Founding Fathers so thoughtlessly seem to have built into the Constitution . . . " (Italies In the original).

I fear that some of your readers might get the mistaken impression that the words in italics were taken directly from my speech. They were not, of course, nor do they in any way editorial goes about sealously striking down straw men of his own construction be studiously ignores my explicit thesis; name ly, that the "Watergate affair" has evolved into a crisis of confidence from which President Nixon cannot recover irrespective of any ultimate finding as to guilt or innocence. I stated that Watergate had resulted in a "loss of faith on the part of the public that has croded his credibility and moral authority; a loss that, in my judgment, is beyond re-pair." I therefore recommended resignation as the one course of action that would bring the crisis to an end, restore a fully-functioning presidency, and salvage some hope of implementing the mandate of the 1792 election.

The Washington Post notwithstanding, a presidential resignation subverts neither the Constitution nor due process. It ought not to be necessary to remind the editors that resignation is specifically contemplated by Arti-cle II and the 25th Amendment, and that upon leaving office, a President becomes fully subject to normal judicial process.

Under the circumstances, I can only wonder whether The Washington Post's extraordinary reaction to the suggestion of resignation reflects a fear that it will be cheated of the spectacle of the President's public humilia-tion; that not satisfied with its well-deserved Pultizer prizes. The Post is now insisting on a presidential scalp.

for Stalin's crimes to be appalled by the review of the book "Operation Keelhaul" (IHT, March 28). Does reviewer Edwin McDowell think that any country, includ-ing the United States, would treat its citizens fighting alongside the Nazis against their own country with other than extreme severity? And at a time when the Nazi conquest seemed almost inevitable?

What dark reasons can both McDowell and author Julius Epstein have to insult our intelligence by saying of these traitors that "their hope was to restore democracy to their homeland" (do they, then, assert that democracy had existed in Russia before the war?).

That the Russians hanged only Gen. Vissov and his staff and such others as were guilty of atrocities against their own people strikes me as being quite merci-

McDowell, revealingly, says nothing of the hundreds of thousands of Russian prisoners who refused to join Vlasov's "liberation" army at the almost certain cost of their own lives. Nor does he seem to recognize that the Vlasov army was responsible for an unknown number of American, British, French and other casualties.

I would first ask whether Franklin D. Roosevelt and Winston Churchill tried very hard to resist the Russian demand and to find other ways of getting the Russians to give up their Western hostages?

Bicycle Energy

That "greater use of bloycles could save energy" is not the central finding" of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory report, "Energy Use for Bicycling." but rather the "central micreading" of the Los Angeles Times reporter, Lee Dye, whose article, "U.S. Spends $20,600 to prove using bicycles saves energy", was printed (IHT, Merch 27).

In fact, the report states at the outset of both its prefatory "abstract" and its conclusion that "total energy use for bicycling. . . (is). . . a 90 percent reduction from the energy use for automobiles (in urban travel)." Dye's choosing of a corollary as a prime target for his humorously intended cost-henefit analysis a $20,000 boundoggie while it aptly describes his own capacity for wit, completely misrepresents the bicycle's potential as a vital urban transport mode.

Richardson: Return of Mugwumps

By George F. Will WASHINGTON - MOSWUM were high-minded upper. class 19th-century reformer mostly Republicans, who became so disgusted with Republican

When Elliot Richardson enter the restaurant in downton Washington heads turned hore heads than used to turn when be was just Secretary of Health Education and Welfare or Sec retary of Defense or Attorney General In the eyes of a large and growing public, nothing to became him in government as his method of leaving it,

His public is growing because he travels a lot on a vigorous speaking schedule. On sirphans and elsewhere strangers volunteer to help him if he runs for pre-ident. He tells them he hasn made any decision. So they offer him their business cards for future reference. He is, he tan dryly, keeping the cards.

He says everything dryly, like a soft wind off the Mojave. A thoughtful man of action, his is the striking placidity of the eye of a storm. He has been at the eye of a few storms recently. He negotiated the swift removal of Spiro Agnew from the line of sucssion, for which the nation own him an incalculable debt. Imaging where we would be today if, in. stead of Gerald Ford, an indicted Agnew were waiting in the wings

A Dust-Up

Richardson's diplomacy was not able to prevent the excitement of last Oct. 20, the "Saturday Night Massacre," when special prosecutor Archibald Cox was fired. But from Richardson's yantage point even that was a rather gentlemanly dust-np. Mr. Nixon asked Mr. Richardson to fire Mr. Cox. Mr. Richardson said he would rather not, but declared that "I fully respect the reasoning that has led you to conclud that the special prosecutor must be discharged."

Obviously he is not a Savonsrols bent on scourging sinners. He does not breathe flames through his nostrils. And if the public views him almost alone among politicians as more sinned against than sinning, he does not thick of himself as a victim, Almost no Republicans think of him at all. This in spite of the fact that he became a bot political commodity by helping cashier the heart-throb of Republican regulars (Agnew) and by declining to stay on with Mr. Nizon's embattled Stalingrad garrison.

Today the most efficient way for a Republican candidate to me the dist himself and Mr. Nixon is by asking Richardson to drop by and give a speech. Nevertheless, it is unlikely that Republican convention delegates in 1976 will fall like wheat before the sickle of his charm.

'Away from a formal public forum, he can charm the birds out of the trees. But as a public speaker he is a great riot control weapon. If Watts ever empts again. Richardson should be sent in to give a speech. He can turn sionate crowd into a lagoon tranquility with incredible swiftness.

His "problem" is partly that he is a man of meddening modera-tion. Audiences turn out hoping he will throw red meat et their feet, castigating Mr. Nixon. But he starts making distinctions, for Pete's sake, such as between legitimate and illegitimate national security concerns. Who does he think he is, anyway.

A Problem

His principal interest, the concept around which he organizes most of his policy thinking, is the restoration of a sense of con munity in America. This is a classic interest of intellectuals of the left and right and center, in industrialized societies. But politicians of all persuasions have failed to devise concrete policies that excite people abo promise of community, Mr. Richardson will fail, too.

His potential strength is not as a philosopher but as a spiritual descendant of the 19th-century Mugwumps, the personification of if you will pardon the expresunimpeachable rectitude. Say Their Car Sales in U.S. Are Off

The Japanese car industry has flatly rejected a plea from America's United Auto Workers Union for voluntary restrictions on exports of cars to the United States. the Japan Automotive Industry Association said here today.

Hermao Rebhan, director of the UAW's international department, made the plea at a press conference here Tuesday and in private meetings with Japanese corernment officials and industry leaders yesterday.

The association said prices of Japanese cars have been raised hy about 20 percent in recent months, and as a result they no longer have the same strong competitiveness in the United

It also said the plight of the U.S. car industry has nothing to do with the increase or decrease of imported cars.

The association said that alshipments of Jopaucse though cars to the United States Inercased sharply during March. these were to replenish dealers' stocks, which declined sharply last year.

Actual sales of Japanese cars in the United States showed a decline during March, the asseriation added.

He acknowledged the current plight of the American car industry was not linked with imports, but sald small and comforeign models could permanently capture up to 30 percent of the U.S. market. He called for voluntary restrictions until Sept. 30, 1975, to allow U.S. producers time to content their plants to small-car production and thus enable them to compete on equal terms with foreign manufacturers. Mr Rebhan also admitted that tile management of U.S. car tirms is against import restrictions, apparently because they want to import cars manufactured by their own overseas subsidiaries.

U.S. Car Sales Decline 27 Percent in Quarter

DETROIT. April 4 (AP).—Automobile sales in the United States during the first quarter of 1974 were down 27.4 percent while sales in March dropped almost 30 percent, the four domestic automakers suid yesterday.

Import sales for the quarter were down 21.3 percent from last year, with March sales off 24.4 percent. Nevertheless, the import share of the U.S. car market increased for both the quarter and the month because domestic sales fared even worse. Imports-including those manufactured overseas by General Motors, Ford and Chrysler—accounted for 17.3 percent of the market for the quarter, up 2.4 percent from January-March 1973. Their share of the market in March rose 1 percent to 16.6

Japan's rotary-engine Mazda suttered the worst decline of all the imports, with sales of 66 percent for March and 30 percent for the quarter. Big Three imports-Buick's Opel, Mercury's Caprl and Pan-

Wholesale Prices Up 1.3% in U.S.

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP-DJ).—Despite a sharp drop in farm and food prices, overall U.S. wholesale prices rose at a slightly faster pace in March than in Pebruary, the Labor Department reported today.

The department said its wholesale price index for March rose a seasonally-adjusted 1.3 percent from February, equal to a 15.6 percent annual rate of increase. The gain in March slightly exceeded the adjusted 1.2 percent advance in February, which was equal to a 14.4 percent annual Though substantial, the March increase fell short of the hefty surges in the wholesale price index in the three months prior to February. A sharp and widespread increase in prices of industrial commodities in March more than offset a substantial decline in prices of farm products and pro-

Price increases for metals accounted for more than one quarter of the overall rise in industrial prices last month. Steel mill products rose 5.5 percent and iron and steel scrap surged 14.7 per-

Higher prices for fuels accounted for about one-fourth of the overall industrials increase, the department said. On a seasonally-adjusted basis, fuels and related products were up 4.8 percent in March, following a 3 percent advance in February.

The index for farm products and processed foods and feeds declined a seasonally-adjusted 2.1 percent in March after increasing 0.7 percent in February. The decline was the first since last November, when the index fell an adjusted 1.5 percent. # After the embargo, what?

Now that the Arab oil embargo against the U.S. has been lifted, Mobil marketers and their customers are asking these questions:

Q: Will more gasoline and other oil products now be available to U.S. consumers?

A: Yes, but this depends on how fast and how much the Arab nations permit oil exports to increase. The wider the Arabs open the valves, the easier the supply situation here.

Q: When can we begin to feel this?

A: Any improvement will probably be gradual and spotty, depending on demand. It can take up to two months to feel the full impact of oil flowing from the Middle East across the ocean, through our refining and marketing system, and to the service stations. Remember, we are just entering the highdemand season for gasoline, so the country will require more gasoline to meet the increasing demand.

Q: What's the outlook for gasoline at service stations this summer?

A: In recent years, gasoline demand has been growing by 5-6% annually as the number of cars on the road increased and as newcar efficiency declined because of emission controls. Even so, we may have adequate gasoline supplies this summer—if oil imports return to pre-embargo levels and if consumers continue conserving oil enough to hold demand to last year's levels.

Q: Will U.S. consumers have to continue to conserve energy over the long pull?

A: Yes, for two reasons. First, we believe we 'should minimize dependence on uncertain high-cost imported supplies. Second, energy of all kinds has increased in cost, and it is just good dollar-and-cents thrift to eliminate energy waste. Q: What's going to happen to petroleum product prices now?

A: Oil prices are not high because of the embargo, but because the oil-exporting countries recently quadrupled the price of crude oil. Since foreign oil costs much more than the average of domestic oil, rising imports in the aftermath of the embargo will increase the average cost of petroleum products here. We expect product prices to reflect this cost increase, which can be passed on to consumers under federal price control regulations. The widely differing import patterns of each company may show up as widely differing gasoline prices at service stations.

Q: What has to be done to make America embargo-proof?

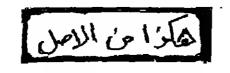

A: Three major steps have already been taken: the go-ahead on the Alaska pipeline, stepped-up leasing of some offshore areas for oil exploration, and Americans' willingness to conserve energy to date. Much more remains to be done: oil exploration in the Atlantic continental shelf, speed in oil refinery and nuclear plant construction, more reliance on coal, new processes for converting coal to liquid and gaseous fuels, and development of oil shale. But it will take years—well into the 1980's-to get large-scale energy from these new sources to the consumer. Q: What happens in the meantime?

A: Before the embargo started last October, America depended on imports for about 35% of the oil consumed here. As demand increases, this percentage will rise even higher during the next few years. By the 1980's, it could begin to taper offif we develop our own energy sources enough to allow us to reduce imports to manageable levels.

Q: What, if anything, has the embargo taught us? A: We badly need a national energy policy. The policy must establish a balance among our energy needs, our living standards, and our need for environmental safeguards. Only with such a blueprint for the future can the U.S. move sensibly toward self-sufficiency in energy. All companies in the energy business must have clearcut ground rules set by government before making the investments required to develop the huge quantities of energy the nation is going to need.

In 7 years of dispensing Sterling we've done a lot more dispensing than that.

We've dispensed with stuffy banking traditions, for instance. We've dispensed with the time-wasting nonsense of playing hard to get, for instance. If you need medium-term Sterling finance for multi-national business, or whatever, just call white-handhar bashless, of whitever, just the us and we'll come to you.

What's more we'll bring with us the financing facilities of leading commercial and merchant basks in London, Amsterdam, Brussels, Cleveland, Cologne, Frankfurt, Construction, Paris, Seattle, Tolymand. Geneva, Houston, Paris, Seattle, Tokyo and Zurich - as well as our own.

We'll come to you, because first we like to give direct, personal help in working out exactly what your needs are. That way we can be sure of designing a money package to fit. And one of our specialities is having at PIB people with specialist Imowledge of different industries as well as banking. It means a better tailored rolution for you.

Other specialities of RIB include speed of action and a freshness of approach you would not expect from the typical bank. But then no one could call us a typical bank — certainly not the governments and companies for which we have been providing short and medium-term finance in Sterling, over the lively years of RIB to date. If you're in the market for finance, call 01-588 6480 and ask for a Director.

THE DINES LETTER has never been more bearish . . .

Find out why Dines is convinced this market is very vulnerable, but why golds and silvers look higher.

skyrocketing commodity prices as a sure sign retail prices are going much higher as soon as these prices work their way in the consumer level. Inflation actually appears to be accelerating toward its final phases, and then deflation with government controls coming off. Food prices in the spectral are vising to provide for in the supermarkels are rising so rapidly, for anyone to see, that The Dines Letter does not see lion those on relatively fixed incomes can possibly be eating as nell as they did a year ago—onless they are cutting back expenditures elsewhere. "Elsewhere" is going to bave to out back production and tay off workers, to adjust to reduced demand, and the rising ranks of unemployed will li, turn consume less. Thus does inflation spread its mischief in vicious cycles. Even with oil flowing again, higher gas prices only add fuel to the inflationary fires, so to speak. New con-struction has already been virtually halted by an interest rate structure forced to remain high because of the gold crisis. If interest rates get too lon, dollars will flow overseas seeking higher rates, causing another gold flareup. Repeated monetary crises in the last decade were warnings. in The Dines Letter's opinion, that

Washington was not coping with the problem. Find out why The Dines Letter actually believes our monetary leaders do not fully understand gold. With a Wall Street reeling under the killing pineers of lewer commissions and reduced volume, it is now finally beginning to get in-terested in gold. Several gold funds are now on the drawing boards, and when their buying arrives, gold and silver shares should respond smartly.

Low P E Ratin Industrials do not impress The Dines Letter because, in their apinion, 1974 carnings will dectine this year, due to the above problems, more than most now believe. The Dines Letter has never recommended more short sales than now, which is why they say they are so bearish, despite phony bear market rallies. Sonner or later Dines will at last recom-mend taking profits on golds and silvers and golng back into industrials—he a Dines Letter

Find out what Dines thinks the recent currency turmoil could mean to you. Find out whether or not Dines believe the recent profit-taking decline in golds and silvers is already over. AND: A special feature on 3 leading currencies, showing which would be most backed by gold, and which are safest to be in at various gold. prices. In clear language Dines clarifies a very complex area he considers vital to investors, but for some reason largely ignored by the press.

THE DINES LETTER calmly points to recently skyrocketing commodity prices as a sure sign strength back to 1948, what it looks like now, and what it means.

GOOD MORNING, MIDNIGHT By Jean Rhys. Vintage Books. 190 pp. $1.65.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

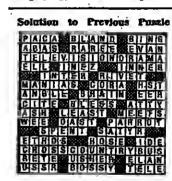

beautiful woman growing old and then, these are lachrymas may be one of the archetypal themes in fiction. Especially when she is alone, when she has Do career to console her, no husband and children to cherish her other qualities, which often increase as if to compensate her for her lost youth. Humanity, wit, warmth and all the myriad lessons of love are so much less cyccatching than physical beauty. People must strain, peer, persevere, have patience, to see them. It is like being rich and losing ooe's money: one is not less of a person, but there are adjust-ments to be made. One has to be restyled, so to speak. Now the only luxuries are those of the sensibility.

This is Sasha's situation in "Good Morning, Midnight," Her first and only child has died and her husband has chosen to taka this tragedy as an omen or portent, a rationalization for abandoning a marriage that hrings "bad luck." Sasha is drink-ing herself to death when a friend gives her some money and sends her back to Paris, saying, "You were happy there." Try again But Paris to a beautiful young girl is not the same as Paris to a grieving woman of 43 or 43.

Hotel rooms—that is what Paris means to Sasha. Is there anything so haunted as an inexpensive hotel room in Paris? People bave loved, oried, despaired, died in that bed there. The word dinginess of the furniture is like a verdict on the present occupant. This is your life: humpy, shabby, shapeless, threadbare, an echo of laughter muffled by dust and the motheaten drapes. Tha concierge writes your bitter biography. The baker wraps your daily hread in paper-thin pity; the patron in the bistro serves you your marc as if it were medicine to hold at bay a chronic condition. A stroll through the streets is a mockery of invidious comparisons. She has much to offer. Sasha has, but no one wants a gift so out of proportion with the machinery of appreciation. To love such a woman is less a pleasure than a vocation. She is as hard to care for as an invalid.

"Good Morning, Michight" was first published in 1939, and nobody has evoked the Paris of the 1930s better than Jean Rhys. stank of dreams the way medieval Paris stank of sewage. To make ends meet—wits' ends that was the thing. To protect herself against this hungry city, starved in belly and heart, Sasha decided that she must have a plan and stick to it. One thing at a time, basics only, no more ambiguities shimmering in the afternoon sun. She is sad, but not self-pitying If she weeps now rerum, tears in the nature of things. "Too many waltzes have ended," as the poet said.

I will buy a hat, arm myself with a hat, a vote of confidence m the future. Even this is not simple, Sasha discovers. "The hats now are very difficult, very difficult to wear," the salesgirl warns. For all her ill luck, Sasha is level-headed: the hat, however, must be worn pulled downcomme ca-and cocked on one side. In her hat, she is cocked like a gun. A man picks her up, a melancholy Russian. She can see at once that he is a person who lives on a very small fixed income. His type is as familiar, as transparent, as a popular song. Sasha gets a job. A rich woman hires her as a literary amanuensis, takes her to MoDte Carlo. At 6:30 in the morning, she comes in: "Are you awake? Tve just thought of a story ... Once upon a time there was a cac-tus-." Sasha's job is to flesh out the rest. "This story," her employer says, looking anxious, "is an allegory. You understand that, don't you?" "Yes, I understand." Sasha answers. "Could you make it a Persian garden?" "I don't see why not."

All this time Miss Rhys is entertaining us very well, and affecting us too, but no one could conceive what she really has in mind. In her own delicate way, she is preparing us for one of the most devastating encounters between two human beings in the literature of this century. When René picks Sasha op, she is puzzled. He is handsome con-fident, not a loser like the Rus-slan—what does he want? Can he be fooled by her old fur coat? He holds her hand and looks at it pensively: there is a ring on her finger, "No good," she says. "Only worth about 50 francs."
"What," he says. "Your hand?"
And that is but the first of a series of misunderstandings that us only what René is

He throws back his head and laughs, in order to show his teeth.
"Very nice, very nice indeed.
Beautiful teeth," Sasha says fronteally. "Yes, I know," he answers, making it clear that he is one of those creatures to whom irony does not apply. He wants to make love to her, but she says, "Rien a faire." "I have wounds," he aunounces, notifying her that he too has suffered, is serious. Without a word of explanation, he shows her a scar stretching from ear to ear, and it remains one of the most mysterious testimonies ever offered by a man to a woman. She cannot imagine why he wants her, but she wants him too, Only "it is a difficult moment when you are out of practice . . ."

What follows then is so comprehensively human-blending birth and death, the frailty of the flesh and the fury of the spirit—that no one who reads Good Morning, Midnight" will ever forget it. Or that the hats that year were indeed very difficult to wear.

Mr. Broyard is a book reviewer for The New York Times.

Exactly how many spades North should hid in response to one spade is debatable. Some would modestly bid two spades. Some would make a preemptive raise to game. The choice of a raise to three, invitational but not forcing, was a reasonable com-

It is slightly less risky to lead from a long suit headed by the king than from a short one, so there was something to be said for a diamond lead that would probably have led to the defeat of the contract. ---However, West believed in the maxim "when in doubt lead trumps." This bromide needs a supplementary clause: "unless you have a singleton." A singleton trump lead is just as bad as a lead from a king, and in some ways worse. Here it solved South's major problem.

East put up the spade king, an attempted falsecard that did not deceive South: West was most

This defense forced the declarer to try to make use of the heart suit. He led the ten to dummy's queen and when this won he followed with the ace. West correctly played the king, the card he was known to hold. But the 2-7 in dummy were now significant.

As the defenders held only the J-6, South had no problem. He led the eight, and when East played the six he tossed a loser. The game was now safe, since dummy had three heart winners and a trump to take care of the remaining minor-suit losers and make an overtrick.

Aaron Ties Ruth's Home Run Record

Immortal Babe Ruth, on his way to No. 714, 40 years ago. with the New York Yankees -

CINCINNATI, April 4 (AP) .- Hank Aaron, Atlanta's 40-year-old slugger, earned his niche among baseball's immortals today when he smashed the 7f4th home run of his career, tying the all-time record held by

He hit his historic blast in his first atbut of the 1974 season—in the first loning against Cincinnati-to equal a mark once thought unreachable.

Aaron's bomer off veteran righthander

Jack Billingham cleared the leftfield fence about 370 feet from home plate. The Reds. however, won the game, 7-6, in the 11th inning.

A standing-room-only crowd estimated at 50,000, and including Vice-President Ford and Baseball Commissioner Boule Kuhn, unleashed a long, notey tribute to the superstar.

Aaron's record-tying home run was hit on 3-1 pitch with two meo on base. The ball lailed to reach the leftfield bleachers, falling between the fence and the stadium wall. It was retrieved by a member of the Riverfront Stadium security force, brought back to the field and presented to Aaron by second-base umpire John McSherry.

Ralph Garr had opeoed the game with a walk and Mike Lum followed with a single to leftfield. After Darrel Evans filed out, Aargo approached the plate to a loud n'ation. He took two balls outside, then a called strike letter high, and then another ball before lining the next pitch over the fence. His Atlanta teammates poured out of the dugout to meet him at home plate and Aaron strolled to a box seat beside the Atlanta dugout and kissed his wife. Then he went into the dugout as the applause contioned. He came out again when Mc-

Braves that he expected them to use Aaron as they had last year, playing two of every three games. It wasn't learned for certain until just before game time that Aaron would play in the opener.

It was his 96th career home run off Cincinnati pitching and his 54th in this city. He hit 43 in old Crosley Field. Agron has hit four other homers off Bil-lingham—No. 528 on June 17. 1959; No. 636 on Sept. 15, 1971; No. 641 on April 23, 1972, and No. 709 last Sept. 8. The first two came wheo Billingham pitched for the Houston Astros.

It also marked the 11th time in two years that Aaron has homered in a game pitched by Atlanta's Carl Morton. Morton was the pitcher of record for Aaron's last three homers of the 1973 season.

Asroo's homer gave the Braves a 3-0 firstinning lead. He received another standing ovation from the fans in the leftfield seats when he trotted to his position in the bottom of the inning.

When he went to leftfield for the ninth, the fans rose in a long tribute to the man they knew would eatch the Bambino a season case exists against American television and press, but Richard Nixon and his men are forever getting it wrong. It is not that the media are hostile to presidents, and to Nixon more than most, but that they are such ab-ject tools so eager to be of presidential use that they have distorted all our perceptions of what news is and what government is about.

Superstar Hank Aaron, hitting No. 714 and still on the move.

years ago I was assigned to the Baker White House for the Baltimore Sun and as a lean, untempered rookie went with President Elsenhnwer to vacation in the Western air. Vacationing was a big part of White House coverage in those days, and Eisenhower did it thoroughly. For five and six weeks at a time he did absolutely nothing that was remotely definable as news.

Each day, however, my more professional colleagues would unsheath their typewriters, pound sway for an hour or two and wire home stories. It was oot a little disconcerting to a new boy when, after four or five days without having sent a word. I found the veterans joking about how long I could go on reporting nothing from the Rockies and stay on the payroll.

The President, I quickly learned, is always news, whether he is involved in any news or not. So we all poured out reams of material daily. The President had eaten beef bacoo and skim milk at hreakfast, we told America. He had got up at 6:30 and fish-

It was worse than nonsense, of course, hecause it created a totally deceptive impression and, hy keeping the President constantly in the "oews"-for this drivel was published and broadcast extensively throughout the country—it distorted the public's perception of government, leaving the notion that the President, like the planet Jupiter, is a force constaotly in ances in news conferences around the country. In the typical presidential news conference no news occurs. Is it staged because cameras are available and editors have space at hand from which they are always willing to clear real, but dull, news about the nuts, holts and boring percentage points of real government for sure-fire hokum about the President.

Typically, the stories produced by these pseudo-events deal heavily in how he looked, whether the sudience was friendly and how well he performed under pressure. They are in the main exercises in the agrandizement of piffling fatulty.

Presidents since Eisenhot er have probably been spolled by media complaisance ann laziness. It is easy to report presidents. and it is hard and dull to report Congress, courts, city halls and zoning commissions. And so the media have cooditiooed us all to think of government, when we think of it at all in easily simplified presideotial terms.

The ease with which Nixon has exploited these lazy old media habits with his receot series of peudo-eveots must make a logical mind wonder why he chose to wage that self-destructive war upon them? When they are so deferential, so willing to be of service in the glorification of his office, where is the gain in the niggling quarrel with a handful of reporters, small voices in the storm, who occasionally have tried interposing themselves between him and the picture of glory their papers and networks were painting of his office?

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP).—More than half a century of reflection has convinced Lewis Mumford that the world has entered a new Dark Age. Hailed as a leader in both urban planning and ecology. Mumford has written more than 30 books and essays that have made him a force—if controversial—in American letters.

The energy crisis has given Mumford new grist for his mill. At the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he is a visiting lecturer. Mumford said that if man is to survive he must develop a new reliance on solar energy, green plants and "I think the Dark Age is already here, only we don't know it," the 78-year-old Mumford said. He said that economists who doubt that we are heading for a depression "are talking through their hats."

A college professor without a college degree, he has been criticized for expounding on technical areas for which he lacks academic credentials. In reply he says that he's "survived" and claims there's a need for thinkers like himself who put others' ideas together.

A native of New York City who now 'reluctantly' 20ez back Mumford has written such books as the "Culture of Cities." The Human Prospect." The Pentagon of Power." and "The Myth of The Machine." His "City in History" won the National Book Award in 1962. In 1972, Mumford was awarded the National Medal for Literature. His first book, "The Story of Utopias," sppeared in 1922. Here are some of his answers during an interview:

Q:What about this energy crisis?

A: People who think it's a minor thing and should sooo he over are biving in a dreamland, really. The crisis is bound to get worse if we don't change our habits of life, hecause we're consuming too much energy. Not merely are we consuming too much energy, we're consuming our capital We're living on the capital accumulations of a carboniferous age wheo our coal deposits, our fossil fuels were first produced. There's nothing left when they're gone. We have to understand this fundamental fact; that no economy can live on its

Q:Will people now begin to change the way they live just hecause, say, 30 years from oow some experts say we may run

A: It will probably be a shorter term than 30 years from now. It will affect everything. It's already affecting people's habits. And who knows whether the whole system may not go kanut in 30 years. Q:Can you give any example of how people have already changed their habits because of the energy crisis?

A:Yes, they're beginning to. For example, there are now so million bicycle riders in the United States. The bicycle is an old invention, but it's only recently that it has taken on mass scale. Our whole mode of life has been disrupted by the car. Nobody travels fast in a car in a city.

Q:What effect is the crisis going to have on the cities? A:First of all, I don't think anything is going to come easily. The changeover that is necessary in our mode of life will take as long as it did to begin the present mode of life. It's taken four centuries. I don't expect the changeover will go much faster, but there may be great breakdowns, great losses in the meanwhile.

As a matter of fact, people already notice it by the fact that they are leaving the cities in such numbers. People are moving out of the city to where they can do certain things by themselves. My neighbors-I live 100 miles north of New Yorkhave begun to plant gardens. For the past 20 years they spent their time manicuring lawns, sometimes spending a whole day no a kiddy car, with a power mowing machine. Now they are getting into planting their own vegetables.

I think the small community is going to come back into its own. We know, by plenty of evidence, which has piled up over a long period, that people enjoy living in small towns more than they enjoy living in big cities.

It will affect the suburbs; the commuter will come back to the cities. I think while this applies to the suburbs, it doesn't apply to the country town. Our life (in the country) has been made inconvenient. There wasn't enough gas for a time. But everybody suspected that this was a put-up job-that there was plenty of gas available

Q: Are you convinced that the gas shortage was a put-up job? A:I have no doubt about that, Look at their (oil companies') behavior. Absolutely irresponsible. No sense of public obligation at all. A big conglomerate is unassatiable. Nobody is really in authority. The system is in authority.

Q:You think giant corporations should be moral entities? A:It has moral responsibilities which we have to impose on the corporations and see that they accept them.

Q:Then it's the government's responsibility? A:Yes, provided it's a moral government. That's one of those questions that you have to keep pushing back. Our gov-ernment is not a moral government and is irresponsible and has allowed the economy to go to pieces.

Q:Then it's not surprising that oil companies did what

A:No, everybody was doing it. The system is what produces these results because the only values that count are power and profit. We are now in a very dangerous situation for a reason that very few people suspect. Until the beginning of this century, almost until 1940, four-fifths of the population of the world lived in villages or country towns on about the same level as the neolithic village. Now only 15 percent of the population is necessary to produce our entire agricultural output. We have industrial farming. Industrial farming will cease to operate as sooo as it becomes unprofitable. are we going to do when the cutback begins on agricultural consumption? It's already happening in every family. People can't afford to buy the food that is being raised at the inflated prices being offered.

This is going to get worse, not better. It will get worse until we have more local food production. That brings me to the second solution. The first solution to the energy problem is to use solar energy on a vast scale, by plant growth. The second is to grow food wherever it's possible to grow food, not just where it's most profitable.

Q:So the answer to high-priced food is to grow it your-

A:Now, then there's the third answer, you see: manual work. Doing more of the work that's done by machine by human beings. Instead of taking a car everywhere, we'll walk or ride a bicycle. This doesn't mean to say that we abandon machines. We abandon our dependence on machines. Q: What should the government be doing about the energy

A:It can begin by saving where it has a wonderful opportunity to save. We're spending money on the wrong things. Enormous amounts of money on armaments, Enormous amounts on expanding of so-called scientific research. We are trying to find out if there is any life on Mars. We're spending enormous sums of money when people are dying from various causes and are living disordered lives. We live in a population that is becoming increasingly psychotic, violent, dangerous to their fellow men. These are our real problems, and we're trying to find out whether we can find a few germs on Mark.

Former U.S. Pilot PEOPLE: Makes Amends in Italy

A former U.S. military aviator who regrets the damage he caused during bombing missions in World War II is paying thousands of dollars to have a painting redone for a church in Alfonsine. Italy. But the pilot ordered painter Anacleto Margotti to keep his identity a secret

"I don't want to be taken as one who is looking for publicity." Margotti, 73, quoted the ex-pilot as saying, Margotti said that the man said he was a businessman who often commutes between his hometown in Michigan and his European office in Paris. The painter gave his initials as L.F. The painting, being done on wood, is a copy of the original fresco "Baptism of Jesus," also done by Margotti in the parish church of Alfonsine, an agricultural town between Venice and Bologna. The town was heavily damaged by U.S. bombing in World War II and then razed by Nazi mines as German troops retreated northward.

The newly founded Brazilian Academy of Humor has voted to award U.S. Secretary of State Benry Kissinger its first Order of the Leoghing Hyena medal. The academy praised Kissinger for his ability to "keep his sense of humor in spite of formidable problems and apparently insur-mountable obstacles." ...

At a Washington party in. honor of Watergate special prosecutor Leon Jaworski, federal Judge John Siries was asked how he felt about having recently made the best-dressed-men list. "How do you make that list when you only have two suits?" he was "They must be judging me by my robes," the judge replied. . . .

"I just want people to be happy," said the woman, as she hand-ed out dollar bills to passersby in Portland, Ore. "If they're hanpy, then I'll be happy too." The well-dressed woman, who, although she refused to give her name, said she was single and lived in Portland, gave away cash in front of a downtown building
